Sheree Fitch!

Currently PARL's Writer-in-Residence!

A favourite author at major Canadian literary festivals and in demand as writing workshop leader, and visiting in libraries and communities. Fitch divides her time between home in River John and, when not at her desk or in her purple Murple room, she's on the road. "A book cannot be book unless it is read, a poem cannot be a poem unless it is said." Visit Sheree at <http://www.shereefitch.com/about/> for more!

Monica Graham

Author of seven non-fiction books, the latest to be released in the fall of 2013. She is a member of the Writers in the Schools program, and also presents writing and storytelling workshops for adults and literacy groups.

Susan Whistler

A freelance author, blogger, and community columnist for The News, Susan grew up in Newfoundland writing about her future as a rock star/space explorer. Currently living in New Glasgow with her husband and two children, she only sings lullabies and has never been to space (though there's always next year). Susan can be found online at www.susanwhistler.com

Jennifer Hatt

"Engaging Hearts and Minds One Story at a Time"

Author of the Finding Maria series, Jennifer lives in New Glasgow in a house of chaos though amidst this has won several journalism awards. Three cats, three kids and a husband, she's not stopping at three books. Stay in touch with her at <http://www.findingmaria.com/>.

Sarah Butland

Her first "big break" came when she heard from a contest that her poem "Wrong Shell" would be published in their anthology; would she kindly send them thousands of dollars to continue on in the finals. Butland's parents refused and so began her writing career. Visit her at www.SarahButland.com!

John Ashton

A graduate of Holland College School of Visual Arts, John Ashton is a local historian and author. He is the originator and coordinator of the Historical Community Kiosk Project, a columnist for the Northumberland Business Report and The News. Connect with him at <http://www.AshtonCreative.com>

Gary Chisholm

Travelled extensively, meeting many fascinating people and gaining many stories over the years. He is an ex-marine diver who dove off the coast of Cape Breton in an attempt to find the wreck of The Tilbury, lost during the battle for Louisburg. Gary began writing The One Eyed Gunner, as a tribute to his uncle, Larry Sutherland.
